Vedic Astrology, more popularly known as Jyotish is more than 5000 years old and bases its interpretation on the twelve constellations from the Babylonian calendar. It relies more on the Sidereal Zodiac meaning the 'Fixed Stars' of the twelve constellations and the positions of the planets, as they appear in the sky, against the background of the Fixed Stars. This ancient system of Vedic Astrology seems to work amazingly well for predicting and forecasting. Western Astrology base their zodiac on the Equinoxes (Tropical Zodiac) meaning 'moving zodiac'. Western Astrology provides a psychological profile of one's personality and potential growth patterns. It is also used as a good forecasting tool. The Vedic and Western Astrological systems greatly compliment each other and together can form the basis for a complete and profound Astrology.
